Infertility and Recurrent Pregnancy Loss

P. Mary D. Stephenson, MD, MSc, FRCSC, FACOG, FRCOG (hon)

I look forward to meeting healthcare providers who attend this Conference for the first time, and reuniting with colleagues, friends, and healthcare providers. Several of our own Distinguished Faculty are offering “pearls for practice” in their areas of expertise, including:

Dr. Bethany Stetson, Assistant Professor of Obstetrics and Gynecology, Division of Maternal-Fetal Medicine at Northwestern University, who will discuss the benefits and pitfalls of preimplantation genetic testing in IVF as well as what is new in medicine and stress.

Dr. David Keefe, Chair of the Department of Obstetrics and Gynecology and Stanley H. Kaplan Professor at New York University (NYU), will lecture on emerging infections in obstetrics and gynecology.

It is a pleasure to invite you to our Annual Department of Obstetrics and Gynecology Conference on October 25th, 2019. We have invited several physicians, nurses, nurse midwives, researchers, fellows, residents, and medical students.

LEARNING OBJECTIVES

1. Describe features of maternal infections during gestation.
2. Apply current national/international guidelines for evaluation of recurrent pregnancy loss.
3. Explain advances in ovulation induction to patients.
4. Describe features of maternal infections during gestation.

ADVANCED EDUCATION IN OB/GYN

I hope you will find these programs informative and enjoyable. The dynamic presenters are dedicated to educating healthcare providers and are all experienced in their fields.
